Participating in Nation Building: Deccan College, Deemed University

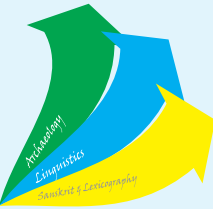

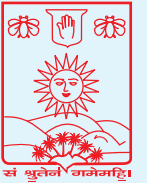

Professor Vasant Shinde
Vice Chancellor

The Deccan College, Post-Graduate and Research Institute, Deemed University, the third oldest educational Institute in the country established on 6 October 1821 is presently ranked 40th amongst the top 45 Universities of the country and 11th in terms of reputation. This is the only University in the country specializing in past and present Heritage of the county and is globally reputed for quality teaching and research in the specialized fields. The University has three full-fledged Departments, namely Archaeology, Linguistics and Sanskrit and Lexicography. The credit of establishing Archaeology and Linguistics into a University system for the first time in the country goes to Deccan College.

The Deccan College, Deemed University is culturally rooted in the Indian civilization of values; where knowledge is pursued for excellence, economic upliftment and social justice. The University upholds the motto सं श्रुतेन गमेमहि meaning 'may we be united with knowledge'. It is here that narrow barriers are broken to pursue the vision of one world. Students from all over the country and world are welcome here. It is a matter of great satisfaction to us all that our students spread the knowledge and wisdom that we teach them, which is embedded in our rich texts and material culture, to all of humanity for a better present and future.

The Department of Archaeology of this University is one of the biggest and most well-known in the world. Students and staff of this Department carry out research all over the country and outside and not only generate primary sources for writing history but also provide economic opportunities for all classes of the society. Under one roof, the Department has eight different labs required for carrying out basic scientific archaeological research. The Department acts as a National centre for basic research in heritage related subjects. Considering the academic contribution and its commitment to participate in Nation Building, the Department of Archaeology is recognized as Centre of Advanced Study since 1985. The Department of Linguistics studies the origin and development of four major language families and scores of dialects spoken in South Asia.

Recently, the UGC has provided Special Assistance Programme (SAP) to this Department, which is enabling it to reclaim its past glory gradually. The recently established Department of Sanskrit and Lexicography is teaching not only traditional knowledge system but also the art of dictionary making, which is fading away fast from the world. This project of Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Sanskrit based on historical principles, being run by this Department since 1948, is unique in the entire world as it is seeking to understand meaning of different words changing with time and space. It has developed a huge scriptorium of over 10 million slips of references, which serves as a basic source of Dictionary writing in the entire world.

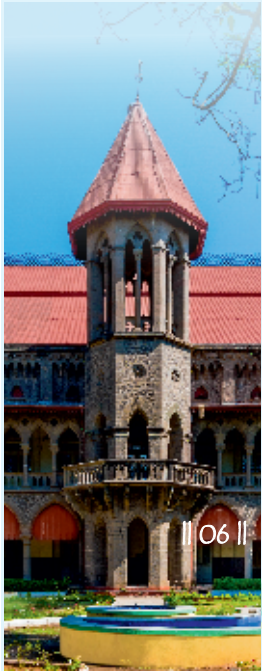

The University has a very rich and well furnished Library, which is the best in the country for subjects related to the heritage studies. The collection numbers over 1.75 lakh publications, includes research reports and books, manuscripts, journals, encyclopaedias, reference and textbooks. The University publishes its Annual Reports and Research Bulletin annually. The Annual Reports provide glimpses of research and academic activities being carried out by the University in a particular year. The Bulletin of the University mainly includes original results of the research activities carried out by the faculty and research staff.

As a leader in Heritage studies in the world, a number of Universities and Education organizations are keen to establish research collaborations with Deccan College. In the past, well known foreign Universities like Cambridge, Pennsylvania, California, Berkeley, the International Research Centre for Japanese Studies, Kyoto, Japan, Research Institute for Humanity and Nature, Kyoto, Japan, etc. have had research collaborations with this University. Presently, the Seoul National University Medical College and the Tata Institute of Fundamental Research are collaborating on the study of Ancient Population and archaeo-astronomy respectively.

The University is planning to open a number of new Departments such as Maratha History, Museum Studies, Heritage Management and Tourism, etc. and establish a Heritage Park on its vast 115 acre campus for public education and preservation of Traditional Knowledge Systems, which is still very much relevant to the entire South Asia. We are aiming to make this University the National and World leader in the preservation and conservation of humanity's rich cultural heritage and values and play significant role in Nation Building.

About Deccan College

Deccan College, Post-Graduate and Research Institute, Pune is the third oldest Educational Institute in India. The Hindoo College was founded on 6th October, 1821 by the Bombay Presidency Government at the initiative of its Governor, Mountstuart Elphinstone by using the Dakshina Fund, which was started initially by Khanderao Dabhade, a Maratha Sardar and continued by the Peshwas for propagating Sanskrit studies. This College grew from strength to strength and has emerged as one of the foremost Institutes of higher learning and research in the world. It was renamed as the Poona College on 7th June, 1851 and later as the Deccan College in October 1864. The Deccan College was shifted to a new campus covering an area of 115 acres near Yerawada on 23rd March 1868. With the help of a munificent grant of one lakh Rupees, donated by Sir Jamsetji Jejeebhoy, the main building of the College was built in a beautiful Gothic style. The Deccan College, since then, has produced a number of students who rose to positions of excellence in various walks of life. They include Sir Ramkrishna Gopal Bhandarkar, the celebrated Indologist, Lokmanya Bal Gangadhar Tilak, the great nationalist leader, Gurudev Ramchandra Dattatreya Ranade, the eminent philosopher, Gopal Ganesh Agarkar, the great social reformer, Vishwanath Kashinath Rajwade, the famous historian, Dr. Dwarkanath Kotnis, the famous Indian medical practitioner who rendered yeomans' service in China, etc. The College was closed down by the British Government in 1934, but thanks to the efforts of the past students association and public spirited citizens, it was reopened on 17th August 1939 as Deccan College, Post-Graduate and Research Institute, by the Transfer Deed passed by the Hon'ble Bombay High Court. As per the Transfer Deed, the State Government was asked to run the Institute in perpetuity. In the next half-century, the University, apart from giving instruction to Postgraduate students and producing a large number of Ph.D. Dissertations, has carried out outstanding research in Ancient Indian History, Culture and Archaeology, Linguistics, Medieval and Maratha History, Sociology, Anthropology and Sanskrit studies. Eminent scholars such as the late Professors S. M. Katre, H. D. Sankalia, Irawati Karve, C. R. Sankaran, T. S. Shejwalkar, and their colleagues and successors such as Professors A. M. Ghatage, M. A. Mehendale, S. B. Deo, M. K. Dhavalikar, etc., as well as the students enrolled from within and outside the country, made first-rate teaching and research contributions. In recognition of the excellence achieved by the Institute both in teaching and research, the Ministry of Human Resource Development, Government of India, awarded it the status of a Deemed University in 1990. The Institute started functioning as a Deemed University from the academic year 1994-95. Since then the University has conducted its own courses for M.A. and P.G. Diploma in Archaeology and M.A. degree in Linguistics, and has also enrolled a large number of students for the Ph.D. degree in these disciplines. From the academic year 2010-11 the Deemed University has started a new Department of Sanskrit and Lexicography. Side by side, the University has continued its research activity in various branches of Archaeology, Linguistics, Sanskrit and Maratha History. As a result of the quality of research and teaching, the Department of Archaeology has been given a special status of Centre of Advanced Study (CAS). Recently the UGC has offered Special Assistance Programme (SAP) to the Department of Linguistics.

The Government of India has from time to time honoured various scholars (both staff and students) for rendering service in Indian Culture.

The Departments

The University has three teaching-cum-research Departments :1. Ancient Indian History, Culture and Archaeology, 2. Linguistics, and 3. Sanskrit and Lexicography. The Department of Archaeology is the premier centre for teaching and research in archaeology in Asia, consisting of faculty expertise in Ancient Indian History, Culture and Archaeology, and related scientific branches including Biological Anthropology, Geoarchaeology, Palynology, Palaeobotany, Palaeontology, Archaeozoology, Archaeological Chemistry and Computer Science. It has generated primary sources, through excavations and explorations, for reconstructing past life ways and traditions. The Department of Linguistics is the pioneering Department for developing modern linguistics in India. It works on the origins of three major language families and numerous dialects in the country. The Department of Sanskrit and Lexicography is only of its kind in the country which combines both the branches of Sanskrit and Lexicography. The Encyclopaedic Sanskrit Dictionary Project based on Historical Principles forms an integral part of this Department. It has a huge scriptorium housing more than 10 million references extracted from the entire gamut of Sanskrit literature. The University has produced 254 Ph.D. theses till date thus contributing to the research in Indian culture.

Laboratories and Museums

The Departments of Archaeology and Linguistics have several essential laboratories established under one roof. The Department of Archaeology is unique in the world as it has a Faculty dealing with different aspects of cultural heritage and scientific archaeology and is considered the second best in the world in terms of archaeological infrastructure and research output, next only to the Institute of Archaeology, London. The vast amount of archaeological data including artefacts and ecofacts are scientifically processed and analysed in the labs of the University. They include Palaeontology, Geomorphology, Palynology, Physical Anthropology, Archaeobotany, Archaeozoology, Computer Archaeology, X-Ray Diffraction and Archaeological Chemistry. The Department is also in the process of establishing Isotope Analysis Labs, which will come up within one year. These labs are maintained and run by trained manpower and they cater to the needs of the Department as well as the country. The Department of Linguistics has a LAN based interactive language laboratory equipped with software such as Multispeech, Praat and Wavesurfer. The laboratory is used to complement class room teaching in Phonetics and Applied Linguistics and also short term courses conducted by the Department. The University has two museums - 1. Archaeology and 2. Maratha History. The Museum of Archaeology has ten galleries devoted to the Late Professor H. D. Sankalia's Memorabilia, Prehistory, Protohistory, Iron Age and Early Historic, Sculptures, Medieval Archaeology, Numismatics and Epigraphy, Science in Archaeology and Ethnoarchaeology. Recently the Maritime Society of India has established a gallery in the Archaeology Museum depicting maritime history of the country. The Maratha History Museum houses the archival records and antiquities bequeathed by Rao Bahadur D. B. Parasnis of Satara and Maharaja of Jamkhindi. The museum has two sections: Archives and Armoury and Art Collection. Both these museums are also used for teaching and research purpose as well as are open to the public.

Library

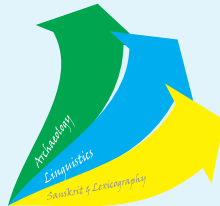

The Deccan College Library is the best library for cultural heritage related studies in the country. It has over 1.7 lakh books, several specialised collections, and over 12000 rare manuscripts. It receives nearly 400 journals by subscription and exchange. Computerization of book collection and installation of INFLIBNET facilities have progressed with financial assistance from the UGC. Many researchers from within and outside the country visit this University for reference work in their studies.

Publication

The University has a separate publication section and an elaborate programme of publishing research contributions since 1940. It publishes the Research Bulletin, Annual Report and at least one part of the Sanskrit Dictionary annually. So far this University has published around 250 titles in Archaeology, Anthropology, Sociology, Linguistics, Medieval History, Sanskrit and related subjects.

Hostel and Gymkhana Facilities

Hostel

The University provides separate accommodation for both boys and girls from outside Pune. The campus incorporates residential buildings in close proximity to the departments, library and classrooms to facilitate easy access. All rooms are well-furnished with common bathrooms. Mess facilities are also available for which separate semester-wise payment will be accrued from the respective students.

There are two hostels for boys and girls. The two hostels house more than 150 students in total. The two boys' blocks are called Gents hostel No. 1 and No. 2.

Amenities

The students are provided with basic amenities like a cot, table, chair and a cupboard in their respective rooms. The rooms are spacious and airy with a full view of the lush greenery outside the block perimeter. All rooms in boy's hostel are single occupation. The hostels have a 24 hr. water supply, the sports grounds are situated at a close distance to encourage students to stay fit by regularly playing cricket, volley ball, or by taking a simple refreshing run along the tracks. Electrical repairs and security services are available round the clock.

Admission Criteria

The hostel admission is carried on first come, first served basis.

Hostel administration reserves the right to deny or cancel admission at any stage.

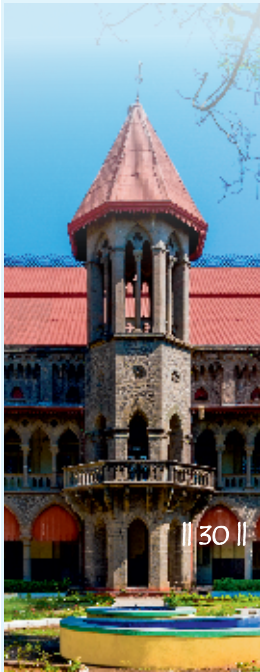

Gymkhana

The Institute has a gymkhana which provides opportunities to students, employees and their immediate family members for recreational and cultural activities. The facilities include outdoor games like cricket and volley ball and indoor games like badminton, table tennis, carom and chess. Recently the Gymkhana has been equipped with Treadmill and body building equipment. It also has a television and subscribes to magazines and newspapers. The Gymkhana organizes a variety of cultural activities like lectures, debate competitions, musical programmes and celebration of festivals. The Gymkhana is managed by a committee elected by its members, with a faculty member, nominated by the Director, as its chairman. The funds of the Gymkhana come from the annual grants given by the State Government to the Institute and from the subscription of its members.

Rules and Regulations

Ragging within premises is strictly prohibited.

Any student convicted of an offence of ragging shall be dismissed from the University.
